Mrs. FDR Pledges Help To Kennedy

HYDE PARK, N. Y. (AP)—Democratic presidential nominee John F. Kennedy made political peace Sunday with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt but declared political war on a new Senate version of a medical aid program for the elderly.

The Massachusetts senator flew to the Hudson Valley to call on the widow of the late chief executive who signed the Social Security law 25 years ago.

He had a double purpose.

Had a double purpose.

Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt had wanted Adlai E. Stevenson to get the Democratic presidential nomination and had suggested Kennedy needed to learn and grow. So the senator wanted to do a bit of political fence-mending in his party. And he said that "yes, we had a very nice lunch," in response to a question whether his meeting with Mrs. Roosevelt was satisfactory.

He said that he "asked for her help and she said that she would help."

Then, too, the senator came here to speak in ceremonies on the grounds of the Franklin D. Roosevelt estate in commemoration of the venture of government into a vast new field of help for the people a quarter-century ago. From a stand beneath the towering elms and maples in front of the stucco and stone mansion where Roosevelt was born, Kennedy ripped into the medical care bill approved Saturday by the Senate Finance Committee in Washington. He called it "unsatisfactory" and added: "It must be written on the floor of the Senate before the Senate goes home. This Congress should not adjourn before it enacts a comprehensive, adequate plan to meet medical needs."

Older Citizens
Some 2,500 persons, clustered on the lawn on the heights above the Hudson River, broke into cheers and heavy applause. Most were members of the Council of Golden Ring Clubs, an organization of older citizens.

Mrs. Roosevelt was supposed to have taken part, too, but as Kennedy said, "This is a sad and somber day in the lives of Mrs. Roosevelt and her family" because of the death of a granddaughter who was being buried here during the afternoon.

So the former First Lady canceled her appearance and Kennedy made his way around the Roosevelt mansion into the hemlock-bordered rose garden where the former president is buried and into the nearby museum housing Roosevelt papers and mementoes. Kennedy told the audience "there is no responsibility more incumbent on us" than to finish the welfare plan Roosevelt began. Kennedy had laid down in a prepared text an eight-point expanded Social Security program beginning with a call for a medical aid plan for older citizens that would be soundly financed and lacking a "destructive, degrading means test," and based on both the tried and tested operation of the Social Security system.

This was the approach the Senate Finance Committee rejected. Instead, it approved a plan calling for joint federal-state participation and financing.

Special Vote

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)—South Korea's dominant Democratic party picked up five more seats Sunday in special elections, increasing its strength in the 233-seat lower house to 178. Three independents also won seats in balloting ordered because of ballot-burning riots after the July 29 general election.

Couple Waits Too Long To Call Doctor

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—A baby girl died of poisoning Sunday and her sobbing mother said she hesitated for hours before calling a doctor because of religious beliefs.

The doctor came Sunday morning—three hours after Lorelei Christine Kay, 21 months old, had died.

"Through our prayers we believed Lorelei would be all right," Ruth Jean Kay, 41, the mother, sobbed. "We didn't want to believe she was dead."

Mrs. Kay told police she, her husband William, 42, and Lorelei were shopping in a plant nursery Saturday afternoon. Lorelei wandered off. A few seconds later she was seen drinking from a ceramic pot. Nearby was a large can of weed killer.

Put Her To Bed
Mrs. Kay stuck a finger down the little girl's throat. Lorelei started vomiting. The family drove home and Lorelei was put to bed.

"As the time passed, we noticed she was becoming weaker," the mother said. "We felt if we prayed and meditated, she would be all right."

Several times the anxious parents phoned a Christian Science practitioner, Lewis Hubner, who prayed for the girl and tried to comfort the parents.

At 12:15 a.m., Lorelei said, "Night, night Mommy" and died, her mother told police.

Typhoon Wendy Leaves 18 Dead
TOKYO (AP)—Torrential rains accompanying and following Typhoon Wendy over the weekend in central Japan left 18 persons dead, 26 missing and about 40 injured.

While Wendy diminished into a tropical storm and blew itself out in the Pacific Ocean, police reported the heavy downpour that followed left 12 dead and 25 missing in Shizuoka Prefecture alone. Thirty-one others were reported injured there.

French Port City Finally Gets A Gambling Casino
CARRY-LE-ROUET, France (AP)—This little Mediterranean port has a $200,000 gambling casino now, but it was a near thing.

Two years ago police told the mayor the casino probably never would be allowed to open because it was only 153 feet from the police station, door to door.

"In towns of over 1,000 inhabitants a bar or a casino cannot open within 450 feet of the nearest school, church, or police station, door to door," the police told the mayor, quoting the law. The town council met. "Let's move the police station," suggested the mayor.

Crowds Cheer Only Tshombe And Belgians

ELIZABETHVILLE, the Congo (AP)—Belgian troops Sunday handed over guard duty in this rebellious provincial capital to United Nations troops before crowds that had cheered only for the Belgians and Katanga Premier Moise Tshombe.

It was a hectic day, exposing the divided loyalties in Elisabethville. Earlier, a friendly crowd was driven from U.N. Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld's temporary residence by Katanga police using tear gas and clubs. Hammarskjöld was inside at the time and the curious crowd was made up mostly of Katangans who had demonstrated for him and against Tshombe.

Snubbed By Tshombe
Having completed arrangements for bringing the first U.N. troops into Katanga, Hammarskjöld got what seemed to be a cool brush-off from Tshombe at the airport before he left. Tshombe, who finally agreed without enthusiasm to let U.N. troops into Katanga, kept the U.N. troubleshooter waiting for nearly half an hour before appearing.

Hundreds of Belgians and Africans watched as Gen. Roger A. Gheysen, Belgian military commander in Katanga, transferred his responsibilities in Elisabethville to Gen. Carl von Horn of Sweden, U.N. commander in the Congo.

The crowds shouted, "Vive l'armée" as Gheysen arrived for the formal ceremony at the Palace de l'Etoile, the city's main square.

There were more shouts of "Vive Tshombe" as the Premier appeared. It seemed mostly Belgians were shouting for this Negro leader who has proclaimed his province independent of the Congo government at Leopoldville.

Many wept as Belgian soldiers laid a wreath at the cenotaph in honor of Belgium's dead in two world wars—the Belgians' parting gesture to Elisabethville.

No Cheers
There were no cheers for the U.N. commander and the Swedish military units when they took over from Gheysen. The crowd stood silent throughout this part of the ceremony.

It was a far different crowd that assembled in front of Hammarskjöld's residence. Most were members of the Cartel party, bitterly opposed to Tshombe's separatist movement.

Demos To Gather For Broader Plan
WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Pat McNamara (D-Mich.) predicted Sunday that Democratic senators who favor "a better and broader plan" for medical care for the aged will line up behind a single proposal this week.

Both the Democratic platform and the party's presidential ticket got a rough rebuff over the weekend from the Democratic-controlled Senate Finance Committee.

Led by Chairman Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.) six of the 11 Democrats and a solid line of six Republicans on the finance group approved a medical care plan limited to a system of federal-state grants.

"Impossible," replied a councilor. "Let's evict the police," the mayor said. "Impossible," replied a second councilor. "Let's not renew the lease," said the mayor.

"Fine," said a third councilor, "but it runs five years and we can't wait that long."

"I've got it," said a fourth councilor. "Let's put the front door at the back of the building."

So the front door of the police station gave way to a bay window and the rear door became the front door—543 feet from the casino.

$75 Million Nickel-Cobalt Plant Taken

HAVANA (AP)—The Cuban government announced Sunday it has taken over control of the Moa Bay Mining Co., an American-owned, 75-million-dollar nickel and cobalt plant in eastern Cuba.

The disclosure of government intervention was made during a TV address by President Osvaldo Dorticos. It was later learned that armed militiamen had moved into the closed plant some time ago.

Other Investments
The announcement, which followed by a week the creation of a National Mining Institute, raised fears in private business circles here over the fate of about 75 million dollars worth of other American mining properties.

Among them are the U.S. government-owned Nicaraguan nickel plant. Representatives of the U.S. General Services Administration and the regime of Prime Minister Fidel Castro have been discussing sale of the plant to Cuba.

Moa Bay, a subsidiary of Freeport Sulphur Co., discontinued operations last March as a result of a new government mining law that sharply restricted its operations and placed a heavy export tax on minerals.

Dorticos gave no reason for the intervention, which can range from token supervision to outright control.

It was assumed, however, the government will declare the step was taken to protect Moa workers' jobs, claiming management abandoned the plant. This has been the usual claim preceding intervention of other business operations.

Previous Seizures
The intervention announcement came only a week after a government decree nationalizing more than 700 million dollars worth of other American-owned properties.

Moa Bay is the largest privately owned mining enterprise in Cuba. Started in 1957, it was not fully completed last March when company officials announced they could not continue operations because of government restrictions.

Still untouched by the government are nearly 300 million dollars worth of American investments. These include an estimated 15 million in insurance, pharmaceutical, rubber and aluminum companies, about 75 million in mining, and 50 million in banks and airlines.

Informal sources said negotiations between the company and the government broke off Thursday after Moa failed to obtain certain concessions, including relaxation of the mineral law and a 13-million-dollar loan. These sources said the company was unable to arrange a loan in the United States because of the bleak outlook for private business in Cuba.

In New York, the Freeport Company said it would take all possible steps under Cuban and international law to protect its legal rights.

Bounce Long, Clear Signal Off Balloon

HOLMDEL, N. J. (AP)—The strains of "America the Beautiful" resounded from coast-to-coast off the shimmering Echo satellite balloon in a three-station hookup Sunday.

Scientists participating in Project Echo reported more progress in the broadening field of communications via satellite, a spokesman said.

The advances included the longest and clearest two-way live conversation between the scientists at the Bell Telephone Laboratories here and at the Jet Propulsion Laboratories in Goldstone, Calif.

The talk, between project engineers William C. Jakes in New Jersey and Phil Tardoni in California, lasted eight minutes and was very clear, it was reported.

In another experiment the two stations cooperated with the naval research laboratory at Stump Neck, Md. The voice of a Maryland scientist bounced off the satellite to Holmdel and was hurled back aloft for a second bounce to California.

The double bounce showed, a spokesman said, how telephone or live television signals could be sent from California to New Jersey via one satellite and then relayed to Western Europe via another if their wings more satellites.

Mrs. Powers Defends Mate

Husband A Scout, Not Spy

MOSCOW (AP)—U2 pilot Francis Gary Powers' wife Barbara—dubbed by the staff at her hotel here "the lady who never smiles"—said Sunday she thought it normal for him to plead guilty to Soviet spy charges.

"He was the pilot of the plane," the black-clad Georgia girl told a news conference. "That's a matter of record. So when he pleaded guilty that was normal. What else could he plead?"

"Our Future
Her soft voice seemed about to break as she said: "I'm here to do everything I can to help my husband. It's my husband, my life and our future."

She said she had as yet no word whether she would be able to see Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev to make a personal appeal for aid.

Also, she said she still hoped she could see her husband before his espionage trial opens Wednesday despite a Soviet note to the American Embassy saying no one would be permitted to do so.

Mrs. Powers, accompanied by her lawyer, Alexander Parker of Richmond, Va., met newsmen in the white marble third-floor lobby of the Sovetskaya Hotel. A huge bust of Stalin dominated the corner of the room where she sat in a black leather armchair.

She had just returned from a conference with Minister-Counselor Edward L. Freers at the American Embassy.

The pilot's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver W. Powers of Pound, Va., also talked with Freers during the day. They all were making an effort to coordinate their attempts to see the imprisoned flier, to attend his trial and to talk with Khrushchev.

Barbara Powers said sadly, but without bitterness, that even after her embassy talks, "I still feel the State Department could be doing a little more. But I appreciate everything they have been able to do."

The conference was televised for American networks and the young wife was bombarded by still photographers, too. There were no Soviet newsmen present. The Soviet press has not yet mentioned the arrival of the Powers family in Moscow.

Says Its Unfair
Mrs. Powers repeated her belief it was unfair to call her husband a spy.

"I look upon him as a reconnaissance scout," she said spiritedly. "And he shouldn't be labeled a spy. He never disguised; he never pretended to be what he wasn't."

Powers was shot down over Sverdlovsk in the central U.S.S.R. last May 1.

Mrs. Powers, a striking brunette, said, "Of course I am very upset." But after a night's sleep, she looked rested in contrast to her weary appearance when she arrived Saturday night.

She is an object of much curiosity to the Russian staff, who have read so much about her husband's activities. They go far out of their way to treat her with courtesy and cordiality. The same care is being extended to Powers' parents, who also had recovered remarkably from the effect of their transatlantic flight.

Powers' father was brusque with reporters on his arrival but appeared almost cheerful Sunday after conferring with embassy officials. When a photographer suggested he pose with one of the Soviet policemen who stand guard at the embassy entrance, he complied and even smiled, as did the guard.

A family friend said the elder Powers believes the maximum sentence the pilot will receive is 10 years.

"Oliver alternates between moments of despair and hope," the friend said. "When he is pessimistic, he thinks the sentence will be about 10 years. When he is optimistic he thinks Gary might be paroled, not too long after the U.S. presidential election."

Nixon, Rayburn May Join Forces Behind School Aid

WASHINGTON (AP)—A strange alliance between Vice President Richard M. Nixon and House Speaker Sam Rayburn, Texas Democrat, appeared likely Sunday to be needed to produce an aid-to-education bill in Congress.

Nixon, the GOP presidential nominee, and Rayburn, who supports the Kennedy-Johnson ticket, may have to use their combined persuasive powers to break a House log jam which has bottled up varying versions passed by the Senate and House.

The House, which took a week longer vacation than the Senate, resumes its sessions Monday although it is not really expected to get down to work until a week from Monday.

Democrats and Republicans want an aid-to-education measure in some form and President Eisenhower is reported in a mood to accept a compromise bill.

But a coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats on the House Rules Committee thus far have prevented any action to send the various measures to a Senate-House conference committee.

That's where Rayburn and Nixon come in. Between them they have to get the majority vote needed to break the stalemate.

All the committee Republicans have opposed action on the measure and Nixon apparently will have to change the mind of at least one of them to get a bill started on its way.

Rayburn has the delicate job of convincing Chairman Howard Smith (D-Va.) that he ought to let the matter come to a showdown in time for handling in the abbreviated Congress session. Smith, who opposes the measures, sometimes is a difficult man to convince.

The Senate already has voted to send its bill to conference with the House. It approved a two-year, $1,800,000,000 program calling for grants for school construction and teachers' salaries. The House passed a four-year, $1,300,000,000 measure authorizing use of federal funds for school construction only.

Mother Gives Sleep Pills To Daughters
CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)—Why would a mother give sleeping drugs to two of her young daughters?

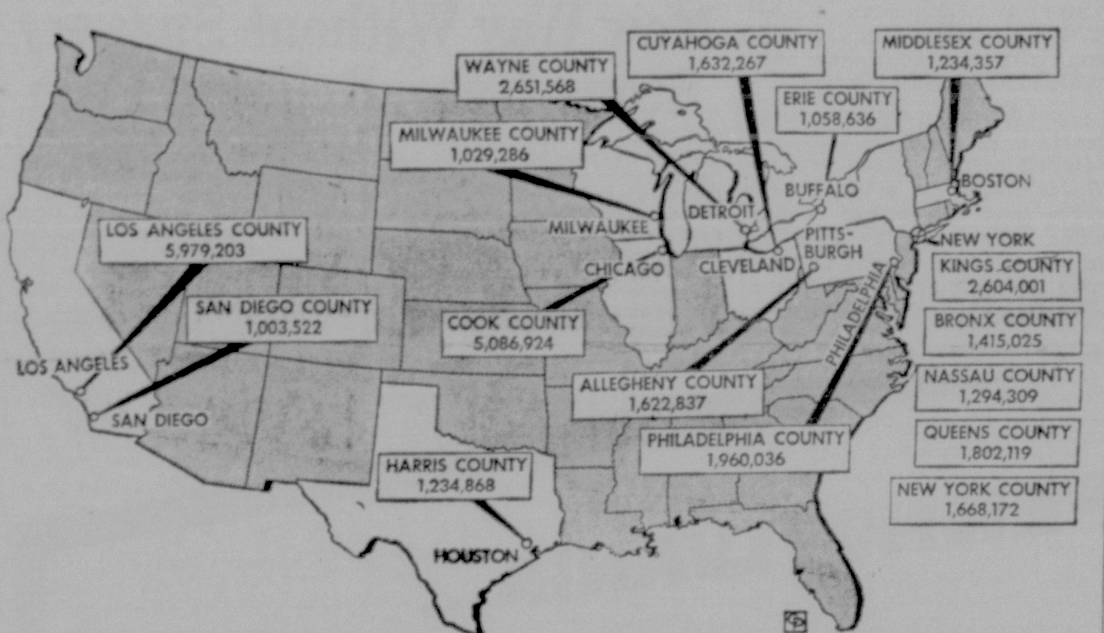

Detectives who said they had such an admission from the mother of this city's "sleeping beauties" tried to reach a full answer to the puzzle Sunday.

The girls are dark-eyed Bernadette, 3, and Venita Fratanantonio, 5, now playing in natural health and liveliness at Mt. Sinai Hospital.

The mother is Mrs. Vincent Fratanantonio, 29, a dentist's daughter who is married to a shipping clerk. Last week she gave birth to her fifth child and third daughter.

She is in St. Ann Hospital with a policeman near at all times. Detectives described it as a sort of protective custody.

Good Morning!
"Hard work never killed anybody," said the father.

Police Find Boy, 4, Locked In Tiny Cell-Like Stairwell

JOILET, Ill. (AP)—Sheriff's deputies hammered down two doors Saturday to free a 4-year-old boy they said was locked in a cell-like stairwell with a T-shirt for clothing, a pile of rags for a bed and a pan of milk for food.

They jailed the child's father, Rudolph Escamilla, 29, on a charge of child neglect. They charged the mother, Paula, 29, with child neglect but sent her home to look after her three daughters.

The mother intimidated the boy was retarded.

The deputies answered a call from neighbors who said they heard strange cries coming from the two-story frame house.

When no one responded to knocking, they battered down the locked front door and then they heard sobbing coming from a locked stairwell enclosure. They battered down another door and found Anthony Escamilla, clad only in a T-shirt, in the narrow stairwell.

The only light in the room, deputies said, came from a narrow window at the top of the stairs. The door at the top of the stairs also was locked.

The child was sitting on a pile of rags, they said, with a pan of milk that apparently had been slipped to him through a chink in the door. The area was littered with filth.

In halting English, Mrs. Escamilla told authorities: "We ashamed."

She intimated that the child was mentally retarded and said: "It is nothing the other children should see."

The boy was alone in the house when found. The deputies took Anthony to a Joliet hospital where he was reported in good condition, cheerful, and eating heartily.

Keystone GOP Invite Rocky

HARRISBURG (AP)—Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York has been invited by Pennsylvania Republicans to open the statewide election campaign at nearby Hershey next month.

State Chairman George I. Bloom said Saturday he asked Rockefeller to address the Republican State Committee meeting Sept. 10. The meeting is Bloom said he also hoped to have President Eisenhower make a speaking appearance in the state during the campaign.

The schedule of Vice President Richard M. Nixon's campaign appearances in the state still is being worked out, GOP leaders said.

'We Will Meet In Heaven'

HONG KONG (AP)—"We will meet in heaven," these were Bishop James E. Walsh's last words to his brother William before they parted—possibly for the last time—in a Chinese Communist prison in Shanghai last week.

William C. Walsh, 70, a Cumberland, Md., attorney, arrived in Hong Kong Sunday after spending two weeks in Red China during which he saw his brother, a Roman Catholic bishop, on three closely supervised occasions.

Their parting last Thursday, he said, was emotional. He told a news conference he asked his brother if he wanted him to plead to the Chinese Communist government for the bishop's early release or pardon.

He quoted the bishop as replying: "No one likes to be confined but I am not unhappy. I leave my future completely in God's hands." The bishop is serving a 20-year term on Communist charges of espionage.

"I told him because of our ages and distances involved we might not be able to see each other again," the former judge told reporters a few hours after he crossed the Communist border into Hong Kong.

The bishop's reply was: "We will meet in heaven."

Quietly Walsh added: "My brother was rather emotional at this point."

He said the bishop had told him the visit was one of the greatest human consolations he had ever received.

general of the Maryknoll Order of priests at Ossining, N.Y., went to China first in 1918. Thirty years later he returned to China as bishop. Placed under house arrest in 1961, he subsequently refused repatriation on the ground "my work is here in Shanghai."

Walsh, former Maryland attorney general, said the bishop generally was in good spirits but appeared to have lost weight. The bishop told him he received adequate but plain food three times a day and three or four cigarettes daily. Chinese Communist officials allowed Walsh to give his brother a box of cigars, some cookies, clothing and candy. But they refused to let him hand over a golden rosary he brought from Mount St. Mary School in Emmitsburg, Md., from which he was graduated.

Prison officials refused to permit Walsh to give the bishop a note from Mr. and Mrs. Mackaig, friends in Cumberland, who simply read: "Dear bishop—best wishes."

Community officials said in explanation there was no "bishop" in prison there. The bishop said he had received only two letters from home in 22 months. His brother said regular letters had been written.

"I have no way of knowing whether my brother has been brainwashed or not," Walsh said in answer to a reporter's question. He said his brother has not said Mass since his arrest 22 months ago.

Three Hurt In Crash At Point Of Gap

THREE New Jersey residents were injured in a head-on collision Saturday at the "Point of the Gap," just inside the Monroe County line.

Injured were Walter Auffinger, 32, of Secaucus, N.J., his wife, Louise, and their oldest daughter. The husband received a cut on the forehead, near the hair line. Mrs. Auffinger suffered a neck injury and the daughter, Linda, a broken collarbone.

The injured were taken to the Monroe County General Hospital by the Portland ambulance where they were treated and released.

Sidded, Jump Curb

Joseph Eurich, 25, of 29 N. Fourth St., Stroudsburg, was traveling east on alternate Route 611, rounding the curve at the Point of the Gap, when he saw he was going too fast. He applied his brakes and began to skid, said Fred Decker, chief of police in Delaware Water Gap.

Eurich rounded the curve on the wrong side of the road and in his attempt to get the car under control he jumped the curb, just missing the wall, and crashed head-on into the car of Auffinger, Decker added.

Auffinger told Chief Decker, "I saw him coming and I drove my car completely off the road, to my right, and was stopped or nearly stopped when he hit me. I was traveling west at the time of the accident."

Damage to the Eurich car was estimated at $400 and the Auffinger car was classed as a total wreck.

Faces Arrest

Chief Decker said late last night that Eurich will be arrested for traveling too fast for conditions.

The accident occurred during the rainstorm Saturday.

Scenic Highway Dedicated

LAMBERTVILLE, N. J. (AP) — Scenic Highway along the Delaware River was dedicated here 25 years after construction first got under way.

The Daniel Bray Highway, the stretch of Rt. 29 between Trenton and Frenchtown, is named after the Revolutionary War Captain who gathered the boats used in Washington's crossing of the Delaware on Dec. 25, 1776.

Gov. Robert B. Meyner was the main speaker at dedication ceremonies in nearby Raven Rock. He said that if all the cars in New Jersey were lined up single file they would form a traffic jam 10,000 miles long, more than five times the length of the entire state highway system.

Meyner cited the statistics to stress the need for construction of more highways.

President John Quincy Adams got only 31.8 per cent of the electoral vote in the 1824 election. He was chosen President by the House of Representatives.

Registration Drive Urged In Churches

WILLIAMSPORT—State Sen. Z. H. Confair has proposed a six-point plan to the churches of Pennsylvania in order that every citizen register to vote in the Fall election.

Confair pointed out that the last day for registration is Sept. 19, and that no one may vote who is not registered.

"I took this up on my own," Confair said, "because I believe every person of whatever religious faith should take an interest in government."

He said that it is the duty of every religious faith to see that its members are registered to vote.

The six-point plan includes, appointing a registration committee in each church, secondly, supplying the committee with the names and addresses of each church member over 21 years of age.

Third, checking the names against the registered street list, found in the court house. Fourth, contacting every unregistered name and seeing that they get to the court house or registration place to register.

Fifth, every minister, priest and rabbi should contact those with whom the committee is not successful, and last, to call everyone on the list shortly before the election, urging them to vote.

In addition to his role as a state senator, Confair is known throughout the state as president of the Keystone Shortway Assn.

The Daily Investor

Put Stocks In Street Name

By William A. Doyle

Q. I am in a position to invest. But my mother, who lives with us, is appalled at the idea. She takes in the mail every day and would see the dividend checks, annual reports, etc. However, through your column, I have learned that an investor may leave his stocks with a brokerage house — in a "street name."

Is there any stigma attached to keeping stocks in a street name? May stocks be held this way indefinitely? Is this device used only by speculators?

Provided that I use a reliable broker, is there any particular risk involved? Does the broker forward dividend checks to the real owner of the stock?

I assume that I would declare the dividends for Federal income-tax purposes just as if I held the stocks in my own name. Right? Would it be easy for my mother (who gets around) to trace the actual ownership through the broker involved?

A. There is no stigma attached to keeping stocks in a street name. Stocks may be held that way indefinitely. This method is used by both investors and speculators.

If you use a reliable broker, keeping stocks in a street name can be less risky than holding the certificates yourself. Less chance of loss. If the broker turns out to be unreliable, that's a different story.

The broker sends you a statement (normally every month) showing, among other things, the dividends credited to your account.

Yes, the same Federal tax rules apply. Because of a recent Internal Revenue Service ruling, you might be smart to play it safe and instruct your broker not to lend your stock. The reasons behind this complicated situation were explained here recently.

I don't know how much your mother "gets around," but if anyone at the brokerage house spills the beans to her, that loud-mouth can be put in hot water. Your dealings with your broker are supposed to be kept in the strictest confidence.

Q. You often advise people to consult their brokers. I have never known one broker who would not take my order for any old "cat or dog" stock that I was willing to buy. And I have owned a lot of different stocks over the years.

Not long ago, I listened to a terrific sales story by a well-known broker on a certain stock. He did refer to it as "shooting dice," but he painted a very rosy picture as to the possibilities of this stock. So, I bought 100 shares at $9 a share.

A few days later, I learned that this brokerage firm had purchased a very large number of shares of this stock at $6.50 a share. They ran the price up to $9 a share and sold it, through a high-pressure sales pitch, to suckers like me.

The price of this stock has been in reverse since I bought it. So, why don't you describe the average broker for what he is — mercenary and cold-blooded?

A. Everything you say can happen, has happened and will happen. The claim has never been made here that all brokerage houses are simon-pure. But don't tar all brokers with the same brush.

You're charging a broker with "rigging" the price of stock and unethical sales methods. Take your complaint

IN PENNSYLVANIA...

You pay 90¢ tax on 10 gallons of gasoline

In Pennsylvania, car owners pay 90¢ tax on every 10 gallons of gasoline they buy.

Does a tax this high—on a basic commodity like gasoline—really make sense? Gasoline taxes across the nation amount to a 50% sales tax—and that's five times as high as the tax rate on luxuries like diamonds and mink coats.

How did gasoline taxes get so high? Well, since World War II, there have been three increases in the federal gasoline tax alone. This brought the Federal tax to 4 cents a gallon, in addition to the State tax of 5 cents a gallon.

Looking at it another way, in the last ten years gasoline taxes have skyrocketed 51%—yet the price of gasoline itself has risen only 5.5% during the same period.

$67 a year for gasoline taxes! Gallon by gallon, these taxes add up to a lot of money. Each year the average motor vehicle owner in this state pays $67 for gasoline taxes alone. That's just a few dollars less than the average week's pay for most people!

Your gasoline dealer—who must collect these taxes from you—feels that gasoline taxes are much too high. More and more, thinking people are coming to agree. What do you think?

HIGHWAYS AND GASOLINE TAXES

Your gasoline retailer, naturally, favors construction of the roads that the motoring public needs. He believes in fair and reasonable taxation for this purpose but feels that taxes on gasoline have now reached unreasonably high levels. He also believes that all special taxes on the motorist should be used only for highway purposes. Yet last year, out of every automobile tax dollar collected by the Federal Government from highway users, more than 40 cents went for non-highway purposes. If these automobile tax revenues were dedicated for highway purposes, there would be no need for the latest increase in the federal gasoline tax.

Open House Tomorrow At Employment Office

THE PENNSYLVANIA Bureau of Employment Security is holding an open house from 3-5 p. m. tomorrow at the bureau office at 408 Main St., Stroudsburg, marking the 25th anniversary of the Social Security Act.

One of the major programs of the Social Security Act is unemployment compensation and the auxiliary services which the State employment service provides for workers, employers, and the community, under Federal-State co-operation.

The idea of the unemployment compensation trust funds set up in each state was to build reserves in good time so taxes would not have to be unduly increased in periods of business downturn. During the recessions of 1949-50 and 1957-58, which affected millions of workers, the program proved its merit. Areas affected by mass layoffs of production workers were also to keep the economy at least fairly stable in spite of threatened chaos.

By pouring reserves of unemployment compensation funds into communities, cushioning the shock of unemployment, the impact of the recession was lessened. Merchants received payments on their bills and could even sell new goods. They could keep their employees on instead of adding to the recession by having to lay them off.

Workers could retain their dignity, buy necessities, and keep their families intact until they could return to work. Funds provided by unemployment compensation headed off a depression.

By 1970, the number of young people under age 25 in the labor force will have increased by nearly 6.5 million—to a total of over 20 million.

Results Of County Survey

Program Advanced For Aging

A SEVEN-POINT program to aid the county's senior citizens has been recommended by the Monroe County Committee for the Aging.

It is based upon data taken from existing records of agencies associated with the aging and questionnaires presented to a sampling of men and women more than 60 years old.

The recommendations are contained in a report on "The Status of the Senior Citizens of Monroe County" which was edited by Dr. Frank D. Sills of East Stroudsburg State College.

The report will be submitted to a state-wide meeting of the White House Conference on Aging in Harrisburg next month and incorporated in Pennsylvania's report to President Eisenhower at a White House conference Jan. 9-12, 1961.

Seven Points

The county committee's recommendations:

1. The county committee must provide the necessary leadership for the successful promulgation of the senior citizens' program.

2. There should be a centralized authority at the county level to serve as a clearing house for the problems of housing, health, free time, etc.

3. An information booklet should be made available to all senior citizens to assist them in solving their problems. This booklet would spell out the service available within the county structure.

4. Professionally trained personnel should be available at the senior citizens' center. The problem of the senior citizen is comparable to that of the school child, and, for this reason, specialists in the problem of aging are needed just as much as are teachers for the school child.

5. There should be a community center for the senior citizen when he may go for consultation and for participation in free time activities.

6. In order to assure the success of the programs for senior citizens, training programs for those who elect to work in the area of gerontology must be expanded. For example, there are very few medical doctors who specialize in geriatrics, nor are there very many teachers, social workers or psychologists who fully understand the problem of the senior citizen.

7. Legislation should be enacted in order that the county program will meet the needs of its senior citizens.

In summarizing the results of the survey, the committee emphasized these points:

"Income Maintenance — Nearly half of the senior citizens do not have sufficient income to pay their bills without doubt, cause others to have the same problem. The fact that income from social security is inadequate for many older people indicates the need for encouraging younger people to engage in a systematic savings program to guarantee adequate funds for their old age. This is not a problem to be solved after an individual becomes a senior citizen.

"Health Needs and Services — The senior citizens of Monroe County do not believe that their health problems are adequately cared for, although the members of the medical profession will make certain that treatment is provided when needed. There is a real need for some type of system that will guarantee, to the greatest possible extent, that the senior citizen receives proper medical care. There are numerous agencies that work toward meeting the health needs of the older person, but there is no one specific agency that will make certain that all cases are given proper consideration. It would also be hopeful to the senior citizen if more medical men specialized in geriatrics.

"Housing — Monroe County is making an effort to meet the housing needs of its senior citizens. It is evident that much more needs to be done. Laurel Manor is a home for senior citizens that has been developed through the efforts of local citizens — how to expand and encourage similar projects is the problem. Housing is closely related to income maintenance and there seems to be little choice except that of making provisions to meet this problem before it occurs. For this reason, each county should work out a plan for the housing of senior citizens. Different types of housing units should be planned to meet individual needs. The important factor is the assumption of responsibility by younger citizens to guarantee their own futures.

"Free Time Activities — There are numerous organizations that have facilities where activities for senior citizens may be provided. The basic problem is that of leadership. Perhaps the final answer will come from the senior citizens themselves. There is a real need for community centers for the senior citizen. The needs of youth and young adults are met by the YMCA, community center, fraternal organizations and numerous others — it is evident that this is an unmet need of the senior citizen.

"Religion — Most senior citizens are interested in their spiritual life and wish to be associated with the affairs of their respective churches. The churches, in general, are cognizant of the problem of the older person and as much as possible to be of assistance. Common interest groups for senior citizens should be encouraged within the framework of the church and an effort made to provide regular visitation as well as transportation to religious services."

In addition to Dr. Sills, the Monroe County Committee for the Aging consisted of Ernest H. Wy-koff, chairman; Mrs. Bernice G. All and John P. Dougherty, consultants, and these sub-chairmen: Ashton Burrows, income maintenance; John R. Wilson, health needs and services; Mrs. A. L. housing needs; Mrs. Donald Gilpin, free-time activities; Mrs. Nelson Beers, social services, and Capt. Charles Drummond, religion.

Five hundred questionnaires were distributed to senior citizens and was reprinted in The Daily Record. A total of 144 questionnaires were returned and 27 more were received too late to be included in the main body of the report. An examination of the late questionnaires indicated that this group did not differ from the group upon which the report is based, Dr. Sills said.

Housing Demand

Suppose, like the majority of Americans today, you "own" your own home — either clear of debt, or subject to a mortgage. Does the political talk of a great housing expansion mean anything to you?

Of course, it means a greater tax burden to the exact extent of government subsidy that may be involved. But it could mean direct financial loss to most prudent Americans who have paid for, or are now paying for, their homes.

It would be a good thing if this were understood before Congress acts at its bob-tailed session, which it is likely to do in a perishing hurry, without much thought of any but immediate political consequences.

Look around today, and in most areas you will find a plentiful supply of new and old homes on the market in all price classes at moderate down payments — some even with no cash down. As these are sold, builders put up more.

The market is pretty well balanced — the buyers find variety and competitive prices, and the builders are able to earn enough to go on building.

Recent years, according to National Association of Manufacturers figures, have seen an annual rate of a million or more housing starts, more or less as demand and other conditions have fluctuated.

But politicians, sometimes, need issues, and now there is a cry for two million starts a year. The result, obviously, would be a surplus of houses. The starts would have to be forced from the production end, not the demand end, because obviously down payments can go no lower than zero.

The every home-owner, who now feels secure in his knowledge that his home is a secure investment, will have cause to worry. Should he have to sell his home, he might have to do it in a time when houses were a glut on the market.

In their eagerness to promise the security of a vine-covered cottage for every voter who wants one and doesn't have it, the politicians may overlook the blow they would deal to the security of all present American home-owners.

But home-owners should not allow them to overlook it.

Opinions Of Other Editors

Revving Up For Recession

At his news conference President Eisenhower entered the dispute about a possible recession. A few economists and politicians have been predicting one; the President says he sees no reason to believe the nation is slipping into a slump.

Naturally there is a certain amount of politics in such an argument as there is in almost everything just now. The "liberals" in particular would like to persuade people that the Administration is leading them into a dip.

For our part, we will refrain from arguing the immediate outlook one way or the other — except to note one pretty sure way to bring plenty of economic trouble.

That way is to go along with all the spending proposals in Congress. As Budget Director Stans has just observed, measures already passed or pending would boost Federal spending nearly $20 billion in a period of one to five years.

And as we all know, that is but a dribble compared to what the liberals hope to get through Congress before another year or so has passed.

Contrary to some liberals' theory, spending must be paid for. Enormous boosts will have to be paid for in tax rises, which will depress business and repress initiative; or they will be paid for in inflation. Few things are more certain than the consequences of inflation. A mild whirl leads to recession; a really big inflation leads to crushing depression.

So there is no doubt the nation can have a recession or worse if it wants. It doesn't even require too much effort.

George Sokolsky Says . . .

TV Public Service

Some time ago, a number of Madison Avenue advertising men, specializing in television, were brought together by the National Broadcasting Company to talk about their business. They got into a jam session on how much public service the public is entitled to.

The advertising men, not being lawyers, paid no attention whatsoever to the blatant fact that the television companies did not own their principal mechanism, namely, the air waves which are the property of the people of the United States and are chartered to private ownership under specific conditions determined by Acts of Congress and the regulations of the Federal Communications Commission (FCC).

Newman McEvoy, senior vice president of Cunningham and Walsh, opposed the "Doer Plan" by which the networks agree to program at least an hour of prime time every week, with a half hour turned back to their affiliates for local public service shows every third week.

This seems little enough in return for free use of polished air waves. McEvoy said, according to "Broadcasting," that this plan was in response to minority groups and that it represented "knuckling under."

But to the citizen, it is difficult to understand what is meant by "knuckling under."

For instance, if the FCC or even Congress decides that its facilities, chartered to others to operate, should be used occasionally for public service, what can these networks do but read their charters and discover terms of the grant. Donald Leonard, of Fuller and Smith and Ross, said at this meeting:

" . . . I don't think TV in any way, shape or form owes anybody anything, certainly not an apology. I hate to see television, as a medium, knuckle under and sort of give in."

This is very curious language. TV owes its existence to a law passed by Congress when Herbert Hoover was Secretary of Commerce, deciding what should be done about the air waves and about the then new device, radio.

The whole thing might have become a government monopoly as it has been in some countries. Hoover set up the system which opened radio and TV to private enterprise but under government supervision.

It was never intended that radio and TV should not be used for public service. The error made at the time was that no details were spelled out as to what was meant by public service and how much time it should require.

The televising of the Republican and Democratic conventions, for instance, was excellently done, but it was not a public service. They were sponsored programs which brought considerable profit to the networks and the local stations.

Would the networks not have televised the conventions had no sponsors been available? As a matter of fact, the sponsors proved to be a bore-some interlude because the listener who stayed through it all wearied of the repetitious stuff about the same ice-box.

I could repeat what was being said and I already own ice-boxes and don't need new ones and cannot afford to have a totally electrical kitchen installed.

One day, we discussed one of the advertisements and decided that to do as the female announcer said would require rebuilding this ancient house and as that would be too expensive, perhaps the only solution would be to divorce my wife and marry the announcer and maybe we would get it all as a wedding present. I decided to keep the old wife. Then some speaker came on and spoke against waste. It was very refreshing.

Pay television is coming more rapidly than anybody had expected and that means that while local stations may make more money, the advertisers will face many difficulties. They may have to return to the newspapers which will eliminate contests and quiz shows and other illnesses of the TV industry which the advertising agencies developed.

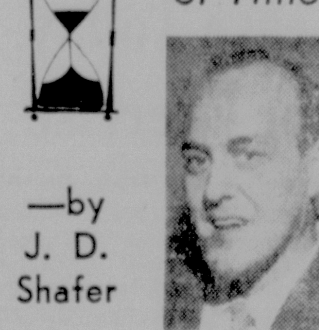

Pay television simply means that the viewer will pay for what he sees. If he wants to look at advertisements, he can see the unpaid TV or he can watch 15 minutes of nothing but advertisements. This is already beginning to develop and the advertising agencies are frightened of it because it means a terrific loss of revenue to them.

But for many people, it will be a safeguard against TV tensions when the viewer wants to murder the announcer who tells him to smoke this cigarette or to get rid of that body odor.

Interpreting The News

Castro-Peron Alliance

By William L. Ryan
Associated Press News Analyst
PRIME Minister Fidel Castro's regime appears to be cooking up a plot of peppy Cuban mischief for South America.

An important ingredient of the recipe is an alliance with the followers of Juan D. Peron in Argentina. And, since world communism has a hand in the concoction, Peron himself could turn out in the long run to be the patsy.

There was a time when the name of Peron was poison to Fidel's 26th of July revolutionary movement. As a dictator, the 26ers considered him—and labeled him—in the same category as the man they overthrew, President Fulgencio Batista.

Lately, however, there has been a change. Not long ago the voice of Cuba's Jose Pardo Llado was raised in passionate defense of Peron. Pardo Llado, Yankee-hating radio spokesman for the Castro regime, found that Peron's rule had been "nationalist and anti-imperialist with its basis of power the working class."

"We do not," he announced, "deny our friendship and admiration for Peron."

Then, a few days later, Castro himself predicted ominously that "the Andes will be converted into another Sierra Maestra." The Andes are the mountains down south in South America; the Sierra Maestra was the birthplace of the Castro revolution.

Titanic Struggle

Harrisburg — One of the most unique struggles — a somewhat titanic struggle in reality — currently is blowing across the face of Pennsylvania. The outcome unquestionably is destined to affect the future course of the Keystone State.

Pennsylvania's more than 5,000,000 registered voters would do well to keep a weather eye peeled on the struggle for they themselves are primarily concerned. Affected one way or another however will be Pennsylvania everywhere and in every walk of life.

The struggle centers around the hotly contested fact of whether Pennsylvania for the first time in more than 100 years is to swing into the orbit of a full-blown Democratic state.

Democratic leaders throughout the state are bending every suspender to make as certain as possible that Pennsylvania will make the swing — with Democratic registrations for once exceeding those of Keystone State Republicans.

When the registration books closed for the spring primary, registration — pounding Democrats had succeeded in whittling down the GOP edge to slightly more than 23,000.

Registration books since then have been opened once more, this time for the November general election, and again if Democratic leaders have their way even that small edge will be wiped off the books — placing them in the top dog registration seat for the first time.

The story will be told finally and officially after registration books close Sept. 19 — but indications at this stage point fairly clearly to the fact that Pennsylvania Democrats stand an even chance of accomplishing the long sought end of beating their GOP counterparts in the registration field of battle!

Should this develop, it quite definitely would mark a solidified and undisputed departure from the pattern of the past 100 years.

Undeniably then Pennsylvania Democrats could formally and quite logically claim the distinction of the "majority party" in the Keystone State.

This plus two successive Democratic administrations here on Capitol Hill undeniably would fairly well ensure donkey riders of the Keystone State a successful passing of the notable "hump."

In other words, three-fourths of the "supremacy" battle would have been won! Around Capitol Hill the conviction is fairly firm that a Democratic tip of the registration scales this fall; a Democratic presidential win in November — with or without Pennsylvania in the Democratic column — would fairly well assure donkey riders of a better than excellent chance of continuing as the "dominant" party in Pennsylvania for a full cycle to come.

These are the hard facts as the struggle stands at this mid-August point. The stakes are tremendous — for it means, should Democrats be able to pursue the cycle course, an unquestioned change in outlook and socio-political ideologies for Pennsylvania.

Undeniably too it will mean a drastic departure from the pattern of the past — an ultra-conservative pattern necessitated by the sobering fact that Democrats up to that point of necessity had to be guarded, cautious, highly approachable and completely amenable to anything contributive to their party build-up.

A titanic struggle right now is in the tug-of-war stage. The stakes are appallingly high — although too few realize it as yet — not alone in the political arena, but in the simple philosophy of everyday living for Pennsylvanians!

Social Security Guide

Q. When I filed my application for social security benefits in January, I expected that I would earn about $3,000 as net profit from my farm, and I have not drawn any checks. On the first of June, my wife and I went to Florida and stayed through August. I have heard that even though I will net over $3,000 this year that I will be entitled to checks for June, July and August. Is this true?

A. Yes. This is true. No matter what your earnings are for the year, you are entitled to a check for any month in which you did not render substantial services in the operation of your farm.

The Allen-Scott Report

Anti-Leukemia Drugs

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott
Washington — The life-and-death race to develop effective anti-cancer drugs is now proceeding at an all-time record pace.

Strikingly illustrative of this greatly expanded research program of the Cancer Chemotherapy National Service Center, and its promising results, are the following highlights:

Two derivatives of methotrexate, the widely used anti-leukemia drug, have produced spectacular results on test animals. Survivals with these new compounds — 3'-bromo-5'-chloromethotrexin and 3',5'-dichloromethotrexin — are three to four times greater than with methotrexate. Some of the animals are still alive and believed cured. Reincubation of leukemia cells has failed to produce this dread disease, indicating the animals may have become immune.

109 other drugs, after an immense amount of screening and testing, are now under clinical evaluation in studies involving 7,700 patients. These drugs include 53 steroids and hormones 22 alkylating agents, 8 antibiotics, 16 antimetabolites, and 10 miscellaneous agents. More than 145 private and public hospitals are participating in this momentous research.

The screening of synthetic chemicals for possible anti-cancer drugs has been greatly accelerated to approximately 50,000 a year. In addition, 500 of the most promising of these compounds are being tested each month in tissue culture rather than on animals.

Several months ago a National Cancer Institute scientist discovered a new virus-induced tumor that is deemed particularly important for two reasons: It provides significant information about the role of viruses in animal cancer; and perhaps more important, it may become an extremely valuable adjunct in furthering research on human virus cancer.

To facilitate this crucial research, the Cancer Institute has established two tissue-culture cell banks. Selected cell strains and tumorviruses and antisera against them will be preserved in a frozen state for long periods.

The National Cancer Institute now rates "research on the possible relationship of viruses to human cancer as the most active and provocative area in the far-flung fight against this deadly disease."

These are the main findings of an absorbing report Dr. James Shannon, director of the world-famed National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Md., has submitted to Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.), chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee in charge of the great research agency's budget.

That budget is now in a deadlocked conference between the Senate and House. The latter voted $455 million for NIH for the current fiscal year. This is $55 million greater than its previous budget and the total recommended by President Eisenhower.

Under Senator Hill's vigorous leadership, the Senate approved proved $664 million. The son of a noted Alabama surgeon, who pioneered a life-saving operation, Hill has been largely responsible for the steady expansion of medical research throughout the country with the funds and under the direction of NIH.

In discussing virus research and cancer chemotherapy, Dr. Shannon stressed the following:

"What could medical science do if cancer were proved to be a virus disease? . . . We should consider, though, that it may take many years to determine the effectiveness of a human anti-cancer vaccine, one other hand, if acute leukemia, for example were found to be a virus disease, we would probably know within a few years whether a vaccine administered to babies was effective, because this form of cancer most often strikes young children.

"Leukemia is the second leading cause of death in children from 5 to 14. That is due to the improvement in the management of all diseases, and is not necessarily an increase in the number of deaths from cancer, for fewer are dying from other diseases.

"The progress in cancer chemotherapy in recent years is marked by the development of a number of drugs for the temporary control of human cancer. For example: In 1950, the average acute leukemia patient survived only a few months after diagnosis. Today the average patient may live a year or more. And in virus cancer research, new knowledge has led to development of vaccines that will prevent certain viral tumors in animals.

"There is real hope that research may show that some forms of human cancer are caused by viruses and that these, too, may be prevented by vaccination.

"Another achievement of major importance in the past decade is the accumulation, for the first time, of a comprehensive body of knowledge of the epidemiology of cancer. Prior to the collection of these data, much less was known of the incidence of cancer by age, sex, race, site, geographic region, etc. Today, a valuable body of knowledge exists that is being used to explore the relationship of environmental factors to the causation of malignant disease."

More Good News — The National Institutes of Health reports the development of a new technique for removal of cataracts. This is done by the "injection of an enzyme (Alphachymotrypsin) into the eye leading to a softening of the margins of the hardened lens and greatly facilitating its removal."

Also a new method of sealing retinal detachment, by focusing an intense light on the retinal surface. The scarring, produced without surgery, seals the retina to the choroid and thus prevents further detachment. This new method of corneal transplantation is bringing useful vision to many whose lives otherwise would be spent in darkness.

The National Institute estimates blindness is costing the U.S. more than $500 million a year. Accurate statistics are not available, but it is estimated there are 345,000 legally blind; 1,500,000 blind in one eye; and millions have various eye defects and need glasses. NIH also gloomily reports that an estimated 1,000,000 have glaucoma without knowing it, and may lose their sight if untreated.

Canada Gets First Woman Executive

Ottawa (AP)—Ruth Addison, a soft-spoken, blue-eyed blonde is the first Canadian woman to achieve the equivalent of Deputy Minister's rank in the federal civil service. She worked her way to the top from the job of junior clerk.

One of three civil service commissioners, she has a say in policies governing the 140,000 employees under the civil service act, only 28 per cent of whom are women. Her fellow commissioners are men.

"She's not one of those aggressive gals — the woman-in-charge variety," says one made colleague. "She's effective, but every inch a lady."

Miss Addison doesn't like the distinction of being a woman in a man's job — and believes that any work is well done or not, whether done by a man or woman.

She thinks women should put more thought into their careers and prepare themselves with specialized training as men do. "Otherwise they are apt to find themselves in dead-end jobs for life."

Catherine Kirby Edwards, Roy G. Quick Are Married

South Sterling — A double wedding ceremony at the South Sterling Methodist Church at two o'clock Saturday afternoon, Aug. 13, united in marriage Mrs. Catherine Kirby Edwards and Roy G. Quick, both of South Sterling.

The marriage was the happy ending of a teenage romance that began many years ago when Catherine Kirby lived with her parents in Hawley and Mr. Quick and his family resided in Tifton.

When the Kirbys moved from Hawley, the youngsters' friendship was curtailed. Each married and raised three daughters. Recently, one time after the death of their individual partners, they met for the first time in many years.

Rev. Arthur B. Campney, master of the church, officiated at the service. Before the altar were baskets of white asters.

Attendants were Mr. and Mrs. John Slifko, of Mt. Arlington, N. J.

The bride wore a blue and white nylon print dress with a blue flowered hat and white accessories. She wore an orchid corsage.

Mrs. Slifko chose a pink dress with which she wore white accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

A reception during the afternoon and evening at the home of the bride followed the ceremony. The couple will reside at "Ferndell," South Sterling.

Mr. Quick is a retired lumberman. Mrs. Quick is associated with "The Lancaster," South Sterling.

Secretary On New Job Shivers From Freeze

By Anne Heywood

What can you do when people you never harmed are unfriendly toward you?

That's a problem being faced by a reader in Pennsylvania named May. She says:

"I have a new job as secretary to an executive in a medium-sized company in our city."

Ignored By Girls

"The other girls have been terrible to me from the day I began. They never ask me to join them for lunch, they never chat with me, just a cold 'Good morning' and 'Good night.' I honestly don't think I've done anything wrong, but I'm sure being given the freeze."

"I asked one of the girls what was wrong but she just brushed it off with 'Nothing' and went away."

"What shall I do?"

Well, the best thing right now is to do nothing. Perhaps without meaning to, you acted "snoopy" about working for a top executive. Or perhaps the girl before you was a real horror. At any rate, chasing after the girls will do more harm than good.

I'd suggest you just knuckle down and do a good job. After all, if you're really busy, you won't have time to worry.

Plans For Lunch

Also, don't wait around wistfully at lunch-time. Face the fact that for some reason you are persona non grata right now, so make other plans. Make lunch dates with friends from other offices, or take a half-hour walk before lunch, or go to the library or do your shopping. Keep busy and walk briskly out when it's time to go.

If you quite obviously have things of your own to do, the other girls might get curious and come forward. Also, if you keep aloof and do nothing to irritate them, they may have a change of heart. But if you try to "woo" them, you're lost. Another reader has a similar problem, although it's in a woman's club, not an office. She says:

"One of the women in our club has gotten a grudge against me. I honestly don't know why. As a result, she is spreading the most vicious rumors about me."

Just Between Us—

—By Bobby Westbrook

Guigliano, Italy—(And try and find that in your Atlas!) Taking a wrong road can get you into trouble—but it can also lead into some of the most fascinating country in the world, in Italy. Returning from Naples, we had decided that instead of the new autostrada we would take the old Via Appian through Capua, in the days of the Caesars center of the perfume industry and site of the biggest gladiators' school in Italy.

Instead, we got on a road which not only doesn't have a name but which goes through town not on any map or in any guide book. It was a good, paved road but we were the only car using it, the rest of the traffic consisting of high two-wheeled carts drawn by horses, or the gentle oxen, or the light-stepping little donkeys. Mingled with them were the human carriages—women walking lightly under the water jugs or baskets on their head, or more heavily under the harness of two baskets filled with corn stalks or twigs.

There were the fertile farms, fields and vineyards, truck patches and fruit trees; and there were the farmers and their families working in them, but there were no farmhouses and no barns. Following and overtaking the carts and the carriers, we finally found the farmhouses, all grouped together in a town that went on and on until it was really a city. You wouldn't have recognized them as farmhouses at first: It looked more like rows and rows of great stone houses set flush with the cobbled street.

In the center of each house was an enormous archway and when the wooden gates stood open you could look inside to the barnyard, complete with a center well, with heaps of hay and manure, with carts and horses and goats and oxen, with women washing or fixing beans for supper, and with lots of bare-bottomed children playing among them. Back of the barnyard or courtyard, if you prefer, were clusters of other stone buildings which may have been barns and stables or maybe houses for the sons and their grandchildren.

But by then we were getting thirsty and coming upon the Via Appia with its gas stations and towns with ice cream parlors, we were only theoretically regretful.

Master Builders

Monroe County Master Builders will hold their regular meeting on Tuesday, Aug. 16, at 6:30 p. m., at the Penn Stroud Hotel.

The Executive Committee will convene, Monday night, Aug. 15, at the home of Salvatore Pappalardo, of Shawnee. The program begins at 8 p. m.

Spicy Shrimp And Icy Coffee Make A Pretty Party Luncheon

For the most feminine and artistic of party luncheons, here is a wonderful new deviled specialty, baked and served in gracious shell-shaped ramekins. What the ramekins contain is a treat to behold. This delectable variation of more familiar deviled dishes stars the shrimp!

Smooth and spicy, deviled shrimp is a compliment-winner on every occasion. It's particularly welcome during the warm weather months because it takes a minimum of cooking time for a maximum of eating pleasure. Once the sauce has been blended, and the diced shrimp added, the individual ramekins are baked for just ten minutes. Each is garnished attractively with a whole shrimp just before serving.

As a cool complement to this tangy treat, serve your finest, frostiest coffee. To keep iced coffee full-strength, brew coffee a bit stronger than usual and pour it hot into ice-filled glasses. Just remember to prepare plenty of iced coffee—your guests will ask for another glass or two of this refreshing cooler.

Deviled Shrimp

1/4 cup butter or margarine
1/3 cup flour
2 tablespoons prepared mustard
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1/4 teaspoon Tabasco
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup milk
1 cup heavy cream
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
2 lbs. medium shrimp, cooked
buttered bread crumbs

Melt butter and blend in next 5 ingredients. Combine milk and cream and add all at once. Stir over low heat until smooth and thickened. Add a little of the hot sauce to egg yolks and blend. Return egg mixture to sauce and blend. Save a few whole shrimps for garnish; dice remainder and add to sauce. Fill shell-shaped ramekins with shrimp mixture. Top with buttered crumbs. Bake in hot oven, 400 deg., about 10 minutes. Garnish with whole shrimp. Makes 8 servings.

4-H Club Meets To Plan Picnic

Bartonville 4-H Club met at the home of the local leader, Mrs. Donald Hartman, recently, when plans were made for a picnic.

It was decided that the next meeting would be held at the Hartman home on Tuesday, Aug. 16, at 10 a. m.

Judy Holdorf celebrated her birthday on the meeting day and those assembled sang "Happy Birthday" to her.

Refreshments were served by Donna Hartman.

Those present were Sarah Jane Cyphers, Donna Hartman, Judy Holdorf, Marjorie Holdorf, Holly Price, Mrs. Donald Hartman and Mrs. Leon Price.

Has Birthday

Mrs. Clarence Transue, of 933 Queen St., Stroudsburg, celebrated a birthday on Saturday.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Karl Grumm, from Bronx, N.Y., visited her to celebrate the occasion.

Ernie, in his engineering chores, also found time to shop. His principal purchases was a brass record caddy, priced at 99c, which he will use to hold the files upright in his desk drawer. A smart idea, and one we had him pass along to the listeners as the day's household hint.

Bill Wells, our fashion merchandise manager, walked with me part of the way, mentioning that our manager, Jack Kerlin, had said he never before had seen so many people on the streets of Stroudsburg so early in the morning—a statement Mr. Kerlin had previously made to me.

"Don't tell me now," I wailed, "say it on the air."

"No thank you," he said, skipping blithely into the store. "I read your column this morning, and I'm one of those fellow employees you mentioned who won't talk over the radio."

Inside the front door were a number of tables with red and white striped canopies. Mr. Wyckoff Sr., and Holt, were busily arranging merchandise there. "Wonderful buys in needles," Papa called out, "only three cents." I agreed, but said, "I haven't the time to sew."

"That's true," Papa agreed, and then, with a gleam in his eye, "You haven't the time—and you haven't the ability." Chuckling, he turned his attention to a woman who was delighted to buy a package of needles for three cents.

It wasn't exactly bedlam indoors—but it wasn't quiet either. And outside it was positively turmoil. The melodeon played—the hi fi played... the rains came, but still the elderly ladies sat on the benches and beamed contentedly at the milling throng. Up the street an adorable little girl in a fluffy blue dress tried on men's straw hats and peered with interest at herself in a store window. She was serious... businesslike... quite alone... and completely unaware that I stopped to smile at her unwavering interest in herself.

When the program was over, I hurried across the street, stretched out on a table in the Presbyterian church, gave my pint of blood, and then, after a leisurely "coffee break" in the company of Howard Popkin of the Jay Coes, and Rev. Seely, also donors, hurried back to work. By now the sun was shining. A few minutes ago I stopped typing and what was your guest, Johnny Wells, what it was that made everyone come out even in the rain for Sidewalk Days.

"I don't really know," he answered sagely, "except that there are lots of bargains and lots of other people, so I guess it's fun." And I guess he's right!

Duckloe And Brothers To Celebrate Anniversary

NOW in their 101st year of business, Frederick Duckloe & Bros., Inc., Portland, still produce furniture in the fine tradition of Frederick Duckloe over a hundred years ago.

Nearly a full century has gone by since the first all-handcrafted Windsor Chair was delivered by horse and wagon by Frederick Duckloe in 1859. In 1898, William Duckloe, father of the present brothers was born. William Duckloe was trained in the "old school" . . . to produce by hand skill the comb and loop pattern Windsor chairs which are considered by many collectors of Americana to be the finest known.

Very limited was his production over many years because of this handicrafting.

Very limited was the scope of tools; never had power tools been used; never over the years had any mass production facilities been considered.

Trained In Tradition
Today Frederick Duckloe and

In using an electric sander, it is important that the abrasive paper be stretched tightly across the pad. This is especially vital in using an orbital sander, in which the pad moves back and forth in a slight orbit.

FLAT BASE NEEDED
Resilient floor tiles should never be laid over a single wood floor. A subflooring of plywood or hardboard is necessary to serve as a base for the tiles.

Couple Heading For Nigeria

JACK G. Gelinas, son of Mrs. Margaret E. Gelinas of 189 Ansonia St., East Stroudsburg, and the late A. J. Gelinas, set sail with his wife Barbara, the former Barbara Link of Scarsdale, N.Y., and their wired-hair fox terrier, Penny, aboard the S.S. United States recently enroute to Le Havre, France.

From Le Havre the couple traveled, cum Penny, to Paris before flying to Lisbon, Portugal, where they will spend five days vacationing before winging their way southward along the coast of West Africa to Accra, Ghana, and their destination Lagos, capital of Nigeria, for a second tour with Mobile Oil Nigeria Limited.

Jack has been public relations advisor for Mobile Oil in Nigeria and the British Cameroons since September, 1958. The three of them returned to the states, from Nigeria, after 19 months in that largest of African countries, in April of this year and spent most of their vacation in the Stroudsburg area.

Gelinas attended local schools and is a graduate of East Stroudsburg High School, class of 1947. At high school he was president of the Junior Historical Society and served a year as president of the Northwestern Pennsylvania Junior Historical Society.

He also played varsity end for two years with the school football eleven. In his senior year he went on to the state gree in business administration in June 1951.

Following through with a business course at Syracuse University for a semester, he transferred his credit to Boston University, where he started his academic study of public relations at the university's School of Public Relations and Communications.

Jack came to know his way around the large campus at Boston as easily as he had Keystone College, La Plume, Gelinas worked in the bindery of Hughes Printing Co.

At Keystone, he was elected president of his freshman class and served on the student council two years. He graduated with an Associate in Arts degree.

He disrupted his studies and went to New York City to assist first-hand in one of the greatest financial battles of our times—the Allegheny-Young-Kirby Ownership Board vs. the New York Central System and the Vanderbilt railroad empire.

After the widely reported proxy contest Gelinas returned to Boston in the summer of 1953 to complete his thesis and receive his Master's degree in public relations. A month later he accepted a public relations position with the Wolfson-Montgomery Ward Stockholders Committee. The Lewis E. Wolfson interests were vying for control of the nationwide mercantile chain—Montgomery

Ward and Co.

At the conclusion of this shareholders' battle, Jack again entered the Robert R. Young camp; this time as public relations assistant for the New York Central Railroad, a post he held until 1956 when he joined Socony Mobile Oil Company, Inc.

During the two and a half years he was in Mobile's headquarters public relations department at New York, he was a member of the press, radio, television and special events section. And on Sept. 10, 1958—four days after their wedding—Jack and Barbara left the United States for their first stint with Mobile in West Africa.

By the time they arrive in Nigeria on Wednesday their travels during this short period since their wedding will have taken them to a dozen different countries.

Gelinas will soon be writing a weekly column for The Daily Record about his and Barbara's (and Penny's) travels, adventures, experiences and life-in-general in that part of Africa.

WISHING is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Cubs Slam Phils Twice To Take Seventh Place

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Rookie Ron Santo's grand slam home run in the eighth and Dick Ellsworth's four-hit pitching in the opener gave the Chicago Cubs a clean sweep of a doubleheader with the Philadelphia Phillies, 2-1 and 7-3 Sunday. The victories moved the Cubs into seventh place, a half game ahead of the Phils. Santo's home run in the sixth inning of the nightcap was his second of the day. The other came in the second inning of the first game of loser Gene Conley. It was Conley's ninth loss against seven victories.

Ellsworth, in winning his sixth game in 14 decisions, didn't allow a run until the Phils combined doubles by Bobby Del Greco and Tony Taylor in the ninth inning. The Cubs had scored their other run in the fourth after Lee Walls booted Ernie Banks' grounder and Frank Thomas and Sam Taylor singled.

Moe Drabowsky was given credit for the victory in the nightcap although he was relieved in the eighth by Joe Schaffernoth. Two other Cub pitchers, Don Elston and Glen Hobbie, were called in to handle a ninth inning rally by the Phils.

Banks had given the Cubs a 2-0 lead in the first inning with his 33rd home run of the season.

Tigers Trim Tribe Twice; With Second On Homer 3-2

CLEVELAND (AP)—A home run and a single by Charlie Maxwell — good for two runs — capped a nine-hit attack by Detroit and the Tigers defeated the Cleveland Indians, 3-2, in the second game of a doubleheader Sunday. Bill Fischer held the Indians to five scattered hits in winning the opener, 6-1.

Cleveland errors gave the Tigers three unearned runs in the first three innings of the opener and they added another run in the fourth on a walk, a single and a double. Steve Balke and Colavito hit back-to-back homers off loser Dick Stigman in the fifth.

The Indians got their run in the sixth when Ken Aspromonte led off with a single, advanced to third on a double by Harvey Kuenn and scored on a play at first base.

He weakened in the eighth, however, and gave up a single to leadoff batter Jim Piersall, and Tito Francona followed with a home run over the rightfield fence. Hank Aguirre replaced Foytack on the mound and retired the next three batters.

Maxwell hit his 18th home run off the season, a shot into the right field stands, with the bases bare and two out in the fifth.

L. A. Wins Second To Earn Split

CINCINNATI (AP)—Los Angeles came from behind with a hitting spree Sunday that cut down Cincinnati's Reds 9-5 in the second game of a doubleheader. Veteran Cal McLish pitched his second shutout as a major league pitcher whitewashing the Dodgers 2-0 in the opener.

Your Horoscope Today

By FRANCIS DRAKE

Monday, August 15, 1960
March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — Johnson once said, "All concord's born of contrast." At least work that many diverse opinions coordinated to bring out the best for all concerned may prove beneficial. April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) — Get schedule set properly. Then plan new or revised action. Do not hesitate where alterations are in order. Expect strength from overindulgences, too little sleep.
May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) — Realize temptation to exert beyond reasonable then suffer fatigue, and likely strained relations where harmony could exist under less vigorous demands. Gains can be pushed. June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — Varying influences. Note trends carefully, follow only what is sensible; don't thoroughly above board. Don't indulge heated discussions. July 24 to August 23 (Leo) — Wait till sure, then act. But be not so hesitant you lose advantages, opportunities. First sponsored: hard labor, assisting the unfortunate, movements to promote good will among all who should work together.
August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — Under present beneficial Mercury and other aspects it is advisable to get in all the astute tactics possible. Beware of new needs, problems. Accept the new of worth.
September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — You could get off on the "wrong foot" — not careful now. Think then proceed. Steady endeavor or makes sure, deep inroads. Resist false conflict, prejudice, stilted methods.
October 24 to November 23 (Scorpio) — Under happy star aspects, especially: new tasks putting revitalized efforts into old ones of value; consolidating endeavors, approving, complimenting others; organized responsibility.
November 24 to December 21 (Sagittarius) — Easier to do some things than others now, which often happens. What is important: How you react to contingencies, necessary action and contracts. Composition, action, action.
December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn) — You would do well to note best efforts of others, compare all considerations, and not let "little" things so annoy. Difficult work offers biggest rewards now.
January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) — Here is a chance for desirable change for travel (constructive, even if for leisure), making new friends, contacts. Reciprocity, guaranteeing safety strengthening.
February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) — Neptune and various planets stress faith, precautions, but advocate against unwarranted fear and quarreling. Steadiness, dependability, action, action.
YOU BORN TODAY: A Leo individual of remarkable resources, unusual traits, talents for attainment, ability to make and keep many friends through the years, though may not see them for long time. Adaptability to new work and place, reliability, quickness to grasp current needs of people about you and of your work fit you for position of trust, authority. You like just praise (who does not?), thrive under it. Guard against heeding flatterers. Train yourself, study to better your position. Enjoy your people, outside activity: curb over-enthusiasm, unyielding power, feeling hurt. Show Leo's magnanimous nature every day. Birthdate of: Napoleon Bonaparte; Sir Walter Scott; Scottish novelist-poet.

Bowles Will Not Run For Congress

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Chester Bowles (D-Conn.) announced yesterday he will not seek reelection to Congress, and will devote his time to campaigning for the election of the Democratic presidential and vice presidential candidates.

Bowles, who has been foreign affairs adviser to Democratic Presidential Nominee John F. Kennedy, said he regards Kennedy's election "of the utmost importance to the stability of America and the peace of the world."

The Connecticut Democrat said that he has had numerous requests for speeches over the country and that they have increased since his service as chairman of the Platform Committee at the Democratic Convention.

He said his decision was his alone and involved no understandings with or commitments from anyone.

This amounted to saying there was no commitment from Kennedy as to any appointment.

There has been speculation that Bowles might be named secretary of state if Kennedy wins the presidency.

Dear Abby

If It Makes Her Happy

Dear Abby: We know a lady who was married to a man for 36 years. She divorced him and married another man. She stayed married to Husband Number Two for 13 years, and then divorced him and turned around and married Husband Number One again. Now she is going around telling everybody that next year they will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary. I say in order to be eligible for a golden wedding anniversary you must have spent the whole 50 years with the same husband. Am I wrong or are we just a lot of small-town people with big mouths?

HER FRIENDS

Dear Friends: Only couples who have been married to each other for 50 consecutive years are eligible to celebrate a golden wedding anniversary. If she wants to call it her "golden" anniversary, you can't stop

Surplus Food To Be Issued

SURPLUS food will be issued Wednesday in the basement of Monroe County Court House, Chief Clerk Ray Saunders said yesterday.

Saunders will open the door to issue food at 10 a.m. and will continue issuing until noon. The door will be opened again from 1 to 4 p.m. to issue food to those unable to be present during the earlier hours.

her, but it's not solid gold. It's more like reclaimed scrap.

Dear Abby: My husband's manners are fine except for two things. When we are walking down the street he walks me on the outside and I walk near the street. Also, when we go to a restaurant, he slides in first and I have to sit on the outside. Should I come right out and tell him that this bothers me, or should I be happy these are his only faults and keep my mouth shut?

SONIA

Dear Sonia: Let him know in a tactful and pleasant way that if it weren't for those minor "oversights," he would be a perfect husband. Tell him only once. If it doesn't register — skip it.

Dear Abby: I am very much in love with a woman who is only 28 and has had three husbands. I am 33 and have never been married. I want to marry her but every time I ask her to tell me the circumstances of her three marriage failures she says, "My doctor doesn't want me to talk about it as it is bad for my nerves." Would I be out of order to demand these facts before proposing marriage?
